3                   DISTRICT OF NEVADA

4 United States of America,

Case No. 2:20-cr-00113-CDS-EJY

5                   Plaintiff

Order Denying Defendant's Motion for Relief and Motion for Appointment of Counsel

6 v.

7 Mario Alston,

[ECF Nos. 89, 95]

8                   Defendant

10         In November 2023, pro se inmate Mario Alston filed a motion to vacate, set aside, or 11 correct his sentence pursuant to Title 28, United States Code, Section 2255. ECF No. 89. In 12 January 2024, I ordered the government to respond. ECF No. 92. The government filed a timely 13 opposition brief. ECF No. 94. In March 2024, Alston also filed a motion for appointment of 14 counsel. ECF No. 95. For the reasons set forth herein, I deny Alston's motion for § 2255 relief and 15 deny him a certificate of appealability. I also deny without prejudice Alston's motion for 16 appointment of counsel.

17 I.      Background information

18        A. The investigation that led to Alston's arrest.

19        Alston was arrested on May 3, 2020, after responding to an online prostitution 20 advertisement that had been placed by an undercover (UC) law enforcement officer who was 21 posing as a 15-year-old minor. Pre-Sentence Report (PSR) at ¶¶ 9, 21. Alston responded to the 22 online advertisement 21 minutes after it was posted. Id. at ¶ 10. After responding, the UC and 23 Alston engaged in a three-hour text exchange, discussing explicit sex acts and the payment for 24 those acts, and other messages such as birth control and when Alston could meet up with the 25 UC to engage in the sex acts. Id. at ¶¶ 12–15 (examples of the text messages exchange). Alston 26 and the UC also exchanged messages about the UC's age, during which the UC texted asking if 1 Alston was okay with her “being a little younger,” to which Alston responded asking for her age.

 2 Id. at ¶ 14. The UC responded “15. almost 16....” Id. During the text exchange with the UC, Alston
 3 sent a photo of himself and stated that he drove a grey vehicle. Id. at ¶¶ 16–17. The UC and Alston 4 also agreed to meet at a pre-determined location and time. Id. at ¶ 17. Approximately one hour 5 later, Alston arrived to the pre-determined location, where he was arrested and subsequently 6 charged with violating two state offenses: (1) Lure Child/Mentally Ill Persons with Computer 7 for Sex Act and (2) Customer Engage in Soliciting Child for Prostitution. Id. at ¶¶ 18, 21.

8 Following his arrest, Alston was Mirandized and agreed to give a statement. Id. at ¶ 19.

9 Alston admitted that he arrived at the pre-determined location to have sex with an underage girl 10 who had posted an online prostitution ad, and further, that he had done the same with another 11 juvenile four years prior. Id. A records check revealed that Alston previously pleaded guilty to a 12 state offense for having sex with a 13-year-female who had placed an online prostitution ad. Id. at 13 ¶ 20. The records check also revealed that Alston did not appear for sentencing, so there was an 14 outstanding bench warrant for his arrest. Id.

15 After Alston was booked into the Clark County Detention Center following his arrest on 16 May 3rd, he was indicted by a federal grand jury and charged with one count of Attempted Sex 17 Trafficking of Children, in violation of Title 18, United States Code, Section 1591(a), (b)(2), and 18 1594(a). Id. at ¶ 1.

19 B. Alston pleads guilty pursuant to a written plea agreement with the government.

20 On June 30, 2022, as part of a written plea agreement with the Government, Alston 21 pleaded guilty to a single count criminal information charging him with Coercion and 22 Enticement, in violation of Title 18, United States Code, Section 2242(a). Id. at ¶ 2; see also 23 Information, ECF No. 52. In the plea, the parties agreed to jointly recommend a sentence of 87
 24 months. Plea Agreement, ECF No. 53 at 10. Alston’s sentencing hearing was held on September 25 29, 2022. Min. from sentencing hearing, ECF No. 66. During the hearing, the court adopted the 26 PSR without any changes. The PSR calculated Alston’s total offense level as 23 and his criminal

1 history category as II, making his guideline range 51–63 months. PSR at 42. After considering the 2 parties' sentencing memorandums,<sup>1</sup> Alston's exhibits to his memorandum, counsels' arguments, 3 Alston's statement, the PSR, and the factors set forth in 18 U.S.C. § 3553(a), the court sentenced 4 Alston to 87 months in the custody of the Bureau of Prisons with a lifetime term of supervised 5 release to follow. J., ECF No. 67.

6       C. Alston appeals his sentence at the Ninth Circuit.

7       Alston filed a timely notice of appeal (ECF No. 69), challenging his 87-month sentence.<sup>2</sup>

8 See Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals memorandum affirming judgment, ECF No. 85 at 1.
 9 Specifically, Alston challenged the reasonableness of the sentence given that the PSR guideline 10 range was lower than he expected. Id. at 2. Alston also argued that this court gave undue weight 11 to Alston's criminal history and past marijuana use. Id. In rejecting Alston's arguments, the Ninth 12 Circuit determined that the 87-month sentence was "substantively reasonable in light of the 13 totality of the circumstances and the 18 U.S.C. § 3553(a) factors, including the nature of the 14 offense and Alston's criminal history." Id. As a result, the judgment and sentence were affirmed.

15       D. Alston files this motion for relief under to 28 U.S.C. § 2255.

16       On November 6, 2023, Alston filed the instant § 2255 motion for post-conviction relief.

17 ECF No. 89.<sup>3</sup> Therein, Alston alleges that both attorneys who represented him in District Court 18 advised him that his criminal history category would likely be a "4 or 5." ECF No. 89 at 3. Alston 19 also alleges that his attorney "refused to go with the governments recommendation of 63 20 months." Id. Last, he alleges that he presented a case to his attorney (United States v. Huseth, 2021

 22
 23

24       <sup>2</sup> Alston also challenged the court's application of an enhancement for use of a computer, but the panel 25 declined to consider that argument because "it was unsupported by any argument." ECF No. 85 at 2.

26       <sup>3</sup> In his motion, Alston claimed that his direct appeal was still pending. See ECF No. 89 at 1. The memorandum resolving his appeal was issued on September 19, 2023. ECF No. 85. Given that there were just six-weeks in between the two filings, the court assumes that Alston had drafted and mailed this motion prior to receiving the disposition of his appeal.

1 WL 4940915 (D. Kan. Oct. 22, 2021)) wherein a judge did not apply the two-level enhancement 2 for use of a computer<sup>4</sup> to the defendant's sentencing guidelines. Id.

3 II. Discussion

4 A. Motion for Appointment of Counsel is denied without prejudice.

5 Title 18, United States Code, § 3006A governs the process for individuals seeking the 6 appointment of counsel to assist with § 2255 proceedings. That section provides that 7 “[w]henever the United States magistrate judge or the court determines that the interests of 8 justice so require, representation may be provided for any financially eligible person who ... is 9 seeking relief under section 2241, 2254, or 2255 of title 28.” 18 U.S.C. § 3006A(a)(2)(B).

10 I find that appointment of counsel is unwarranted in this case. The Ninth Circuit has 11 long noted that counsel should be appointed “when the complexities of the case are such that 12 denial of counsel would amount to a denial of due process.” Brown v. United States, 623 F.2d 54, 61 13 (9th Cir. 1980); see also Sanchez v. United States, 50 F.3d 1448, 1456 (9th Cir. 1995) (explaining “there 14 is no constitutional right to counsel at a collateral, post-conviction section 2255 proceeding”).
 15 The issues raised by Alston’s § 2255 motion are not so complex that he will be unable to navigate 16 them without the appointment of counsel. Accordingly, I deny Alston’s motion for appointment 17 of counsel without prejudice.

18 B. Alston’s § 2255 motion is denied.

19 Alston brings this § 2255 petition, alleging ineffective assistance of counsel. Under Title 20 28, United States Code, § 2255, a petitioner may file a motion with the court that imposed the 21 sentence to vacate, set aside, or correct the sentence. 28 U.S.C. § 2255(a); Tripathi v. Henman, 843
 22 F.2d 1160, 1162 (9th Cir. 1988). A § 2255 motion may be brought for the following reasons: (1) 23 “the sentence was imposed in violation of the Constitution or laws of the United States;” (2) 24 “the court was without jurisdiction to impose such sentence;” (3) “the sentence was in excess of 25 the maximum authorized by law;” or (4) the sentence “is otherwise subject to collateral attack.”

26 <sup>4</sup> The court liberally construes this argument as referencing the two-level enhancement for use of a computer set forth in U.S.S.G. § 2G3.1(b)(3).

1 28 U.S.C. § 2255(a); see also United States v. Berry, 624 F.3d 1031, 1038 (9th Cir. 2010). “[A] district 2 court must grant a hearing to determine the validity of a petition brought under [§ 2255], 3 ‘[u]nless the motions and the files and records of the case conclusively show that the prisoner is 4 entitled to no relief.’” United States v. Blaylock, 20 F.3d 1458, 1465 (9th Cir. 1994), as amended (May 5 1994) (quoting 28 U.S.C. § 2255).

6       However, post-conviction challenges, like the one here, do not exist to allow criminal 7 defendants multiple opportunities to challenge their sentence. See United States v. Johnson, 988 F.2d 8 941, 945 (9th Cir. 1993) (“Section 2255 ... is not designed to provide criminal defendants 9 multiple opportunities to challenge their sentence”). Rather, they are designed to allow 10 defendants the opportunity to attack their conviction or sentence as unconstitutional or 11 contrary to federal law. Id. An issue that has been decided adversely on appeal from a conviction 12 cannot be relitigated on a Section 2255 motion absent changed circumstances of law or fact.
 13 Odom v. United States, 455 F.2d 159, 160 (9th Cir. 1972); Richardson v. United States, 841 F.2d 993, 996 14 (9th Cir. 1988) (discussing that the “law of the case” doctrine precludes a court from 15 reexamining an issue previously decided by the same or a higher court, in the same case.).

16       The two-prong test to establish a claim for ineffective assistance of counsel established 17 in Strickland v. Washington applies to § 2255 proceedings. 466 U.S. 668, 687 (1984). Under 18 Strickland, Alston must prove: (1) his counsel’s performance was deficient; and (2) the deficient 19 performance prejudiced the defense. Id. To show a deficient performance, a petitioner must show 20 that counsel’s performance fell below an objective standard of reasonableness. Id. at 688. To 21 establish prejudice, a petitioner “must show that there is a reasonable probability that, but for 22 counsel’s unprofessional errors, the result of the proceeding would have been different.” Id. As 23 relevant here, the deficient performance prong also requires a showing that “counsel’s conduct 24 so undermined the proper functioning of the adversarial process that the trial cannot be relied 25 on as having produced a just result” or that “counsel made errors so serious that counsel was not 26

1 functioning as ‘counsel’ guaranteed the defendant by the Sixth Amendment.” Id. at 686–87. This 2 is a high burden; one that Alston does not meet.

3 Alston alleges that his attorneys were ineffective for two reasons: (1) his two trial 4 attorneys advised him that his criminal history category would be higher than it was ultimately 5 determined to be; and (2) his attorney failed to argue against application of the two-level use of 6 a computer enhancement allowed for under U.S.S.G. § 2G3.1(b)(3).<sup>5</sup> ECF No. 89 at 3.

7 Alston fails to show that his counsel’s performance was deficient or that he suffered 8 prejudice as a result of that performance. First, Alston does not provide any points or authorities 9 showing that an attorney’s “best guess” regarding what a defendants’ resulting sentencing range 10 might be, without the benefit of a PSR, constitutes ineffective assistance of counsel. That is 11 precisely why defendants are advised during change of plea hearings that the court will not be 12 able to determine their criminal history category until after probation completes its 13 investigation. Indeed, Alston was asked during his change of plea hearing:

14       “Do you also understand that I will not be able to determine your sentencing 15 guideline range until after an investigation and report has been completed by the 16 United States Probation Office, and after that process is over, it’s possible that the 17 guideline range set forth in that report is going to be different than the guidelines 18 set forth in your plea agreement? Do you understand if that happens, that will not 19 be a basis for you to withdraw your guilty plea?”

20 ECF No. 77 at 22–23. Alston responded “Yes, ma’am.” Id. at 23. The Ninth Circuit has held that 21 “mere inaccurate prediction, standing alone, [does] not constitute ineffective assistance.” *Iaea v.
 22 Sunn*, 800 F.2d 861, 865 (9th Cir. 1986) (referencing McMann v. Richardson, 397 U.S. 759, 770 (1970) 23 and Wellnitz v. Page, 420 F.2d 935, 936 (10th Cir. 1970) (per curiam)); Doganiere v. United States, 914 24 F.2d 165, 168 (9th Cir. 1990) (the defendants “suffered no prejudice from his attorney’s 25 prediction because, prior to accepting his guilty plea, the court explained that the discretion as

26<sup>5</sup> A petitioner who challenges his sentence under § 2255 without first raising his claim on direct appeal 27 procedurally defaults the claim. United States v. Ratigan, 351 F.3d 957, 962 (9th Cir. 2003). Arguably, Alston 28 defaulted on his challenge to the two-level enhancement for failing to support this argument challenging 29 it on direct appeal. See United States v. Alston, 2023 WL 6129533, at *1 (9th Cir. Sept. 19, 2023). But, because 30 it was raised but not addressed on the merits in his direct appeal, the court addresses this argument herein.

1 to what the sentence would be remained entirely with the court."); see also Gutierrez v. United 2 States, 2009 WL 2971283, at *3 (E.D. Cal. Sept. 11, 2009) (holding an attorney's prediction that 3 the defendant would receive probation if she pleaded guilty to a lesser charge was merely an 4 inaccurate prediction and was not ineffective or prejudicial when defendant was sentenced to 36 5 months). On the other hand, the Iaea court explained that "the gross mischaracterization of the 6 likely outcome presented in this case, combined with the erroneous advice on the possible 7 effects of going to trial, falls below the level of competence required of defense attorneys." Id.
 8 (citing Mosher v. Lavallee, 491 F.2d 1346, 1348 (2d Cir. 1974) (per curiam) (ineffective assistance 9 where counsel told accused that judge had promised minimum sentence, but no such promise 10 had been given and accused received maximum), cert. denied, 416 U.S. 906 (1974)).

11 Further, Alston cannot meet the prejudice prong of Strickland because he was sentenced 12 in accordance with a plea agreement. A plea agreement is a contract and subject to contract law 13 standards. United States v. Escamilla, 975 F.2d 568, 571 (9th Cir. 1992). Here, Alston's attorney 14 successfully negotiated a favorable plea agreement that resolved Alston's case by having him 15 plead guilty to an offense that did not carry a mandatory minimum sentence<sup>6</sup> and the agreement 16 included a joint recommendation to have his sentence run concurrent with Alston's sentence in 17 a separate state case. See ECF No. 53 at 10. The plea agreement set forth the stipulated offense 18 level, which included the two-level enhancement for use of a computer. Id. at 8. The plea 19 agreement also stated that "[t]he parties will jointly recommend that the district court sentence 20 defendant to an 87-month term of imprisonment." Id. at 10. Finally, the plea agreement stated 21 that if "at any time after th[e] agreement becomes effective, defendant knowingly violates or fails 22 to perform any of defendant's obligations under th[e] agreement . . . . the [United States 23 Attorney's Office] may declare th[e] agreement breached[,]” which in turn would have alleviated

25 <sup>6</sup> Compare Superseding Criminal Information, ECF No. 53, charging Alston with Coercion and Enticement 26 in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 2422(a), which carries a potential sentence of up to 20 years, with Indictment,
 ECF No. 5, charging Alston with Attempted Sex Trafficking of Children in violation of 18 U.S.C. §§ 1591(a), 1592(b)(2), and 1594(a), which carries a potential sentence of not less than 10 years and up to life. 18 U.S.C.
 §§ 1591(a) and (b)(2) (emphasis added).

1 the government's obligations to follow the agreement, causing a number of potential 2 consequences, including, but not limited to, arguing for a higher sentence than the 87-months, or 3 reinstating the original charge against Alston, which carried a mandatory minimum sentence of 4 10 years, amongst others. Id. at 16. Accordingly, if Alston's attorney had asked for a sentence less 5 than 87-months or argued against application of the two-level use of a computer enhancement at 6 sentencing, the attorney would have breached the plea agreement. While asking the court to 7 breach the plea agreement may constitute ineffectiveness, raising meritless arguments can 8 equate to ineffectiveness. See Shah v. United States, 878 F.2d 1156, 1162 (9th Cir. 1989) ("[N]o 9 prejudice could have resulted from this error absent any foundation for such a motion [because 10 the] failure to raise a meritless legal argument does not constitute ineffective assistance of 11 counsel.") (citing Baumann v. United States, 692 F.2d 565, 572 (9th Cir. 1982) (holding that "[t]he 12 failure to raise a meritless legal argument does not constitute ineffective assistance of counsel" 13 where an attorney failed to move for dismissal of certain counts of the indictment)). Stated 14 otherwise, Alston cannot demonstrate there was prejudice by his attorney's decision to abide by 15 the terms of the plea (which is a contract).

16 Finally, even if Alston's attorney had contravened the plea and argued against the 17 application of USSG 2.G31(b)(3), Alston's petition would fail because he could not demonstrate 18 prejudice given that: (1) the guidelines are advisory and the Ninth Circuit has already 19 determined that his 87-month sentence is reasonable, (2) the plea agreement expressly advised 20 that "the district court will be free to exercise its discretion to impose any sentence it finds 21 appropriate up to the maximum set by statute for the crime of conviction" (ECF No. 53 at 8), 22 and (3) the agreement provided that "the district court does not have to follow the 23 recommendation of either party[,]" id. at 10, yet the recommendation was followed. Because 24 Alston's sentence was entirely up to this court and has already been determined to be 25 reasonable, Alston cannot demonstrate he was prejudiced by his attorney's actions.
 26

1 C. Alston is not entitled to a certificate of appealability or an evidentiary hearing.

2 While Alston did not seek a certificate of appealability (COA), the court nonetheless 3 addresses it herein. Alston cannot appeal the decision to deny a petition under 28 U.S.C. § 2255
4 unless this court issues a COA. See 28 U.S.C. § 2253(c)(1); Muth v. Fondren, 676 F.3d 815, 818 (9th 5 Cir. 2012). A COA may issue only if the applicant has made a substantial showing of the denial 6 of a constitutional right. See 28 U.S.C. § 2253(c)(2). To do so, a petitioner must demonstrate that 7 “jurists of reason would find it debatable whether the petition states a valid claim of the denial 8 of a constitutional right.” Slack v. McDaniel, 529 U.S. 473, 479 (2000). Alston has not made a 9 substantial showing that he was deprived of a constitutional right, so I deny him a COA.

10 Finally, because the motion and records in this case “conclusively show that the prisoner 11 is entitled to no relief,” an evidentiary hearing is unnecessary. See 28 U.S.C. § 2255(b).

12 III. Conclusion

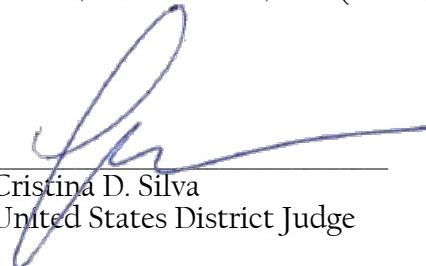

13 IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that Alston’s § 2255 motion [ECF No. 89] is DENIED.

14 IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that Alston’s motion for appointment of counsel [ECF No.
15 95] is DENIED without prejudice.

16 IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that a certificate of appealability is DENIED.

17 IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Clerk of Court enter a separate and final judgment 18 denying Alston’s § 2255 motion. See Kingsbury v. United States, 900 F.3d 1147, 1150 (9th Cir. 2018).
